MA, Yi

Start date:	9/1/2018
Supervisor:	Dr Roger Chan; and Professor Shenjing He
Research interest:	Ma Yi's research interests lie mainly at theoretical research on social process, comprehensive social epistemology, development, and infrastructure, and empirical study about China. His first direction lies at building a comprehensive social epistemology to combine complex and piecemeal theoretical discourses. He seeks to develop an approach which consists of an agent- and ecosystem-based foundation, a reproduction-based narrative of explanation, and a modelling-based examination tool of system. His second theoretical direction focuses on further identification of different knowledge carried by social actors, which causes an increasingly heterogeneous knowledge landscape and cause new problems. He tries to explore knowledge gaps and their distribution among social groups or inside organizations to understand complex social phenomena and to bring a new dimension to social and organizational research. He is also particularly interested in research about Chinese development, social policy, governance and grassroots community, as well as related theoretical construction on Chinese context. His experience of empirical research focuses on the grassroots governance system, government service outsourcing and state-led social work practices in China.
Teaching and research experience:	Teaching Assistance, URBS2004 Urban and Regional Development II, 2019-2020 Teaching Assistance, URBS1005 Urban Problems, Interventions and Design Thinking, 2019-2020 Teaching Assistance, CCCH9033 Sustainable Urban Development and Hong Kong, 2020-2021
Contact:	mayi18@connect.hku.hk